Reading Lists Online

Accessing items on a list

A reading list is made up of lots of different types of resources. There are ebooks, print books, journal articles, as well as films you may find newspaper articles and reports on there as well. To find out if a particular item is available, you need to click on the title of that record, in this case ‘Citizenship: a very short introduction’. We can see that there is an e-book that we can view online, as well as a number of print copies available in different libraries. If you click on ‘Available’ you’ll also open up this screen. However, because there’s an e-book if we click ‘View Online’ it takes us through to the iDiscover record. Now, iDiscover is Cambridge University library’s catalogue. This has taken us through to the e-book record where there's online access but you can also see that there are multiple versions of this record. So we have one version the record for the e-book and another version of the record for the print copy. You may find with some books that there are multiple versions for any print copy and that not all libraries are included in the record that’s on Reading Lists Online, so please do check on iDiscover if you can't find what you’re looking for. To view an e-journal article it works in much the same way: click on the title of the article to see the providers or if you click ‘View Online’ it may take you straight through to a publisher or provider so that you can view the full-text.
